AGENT 2 OF 12

Diwali filled the shop. Will they come back?

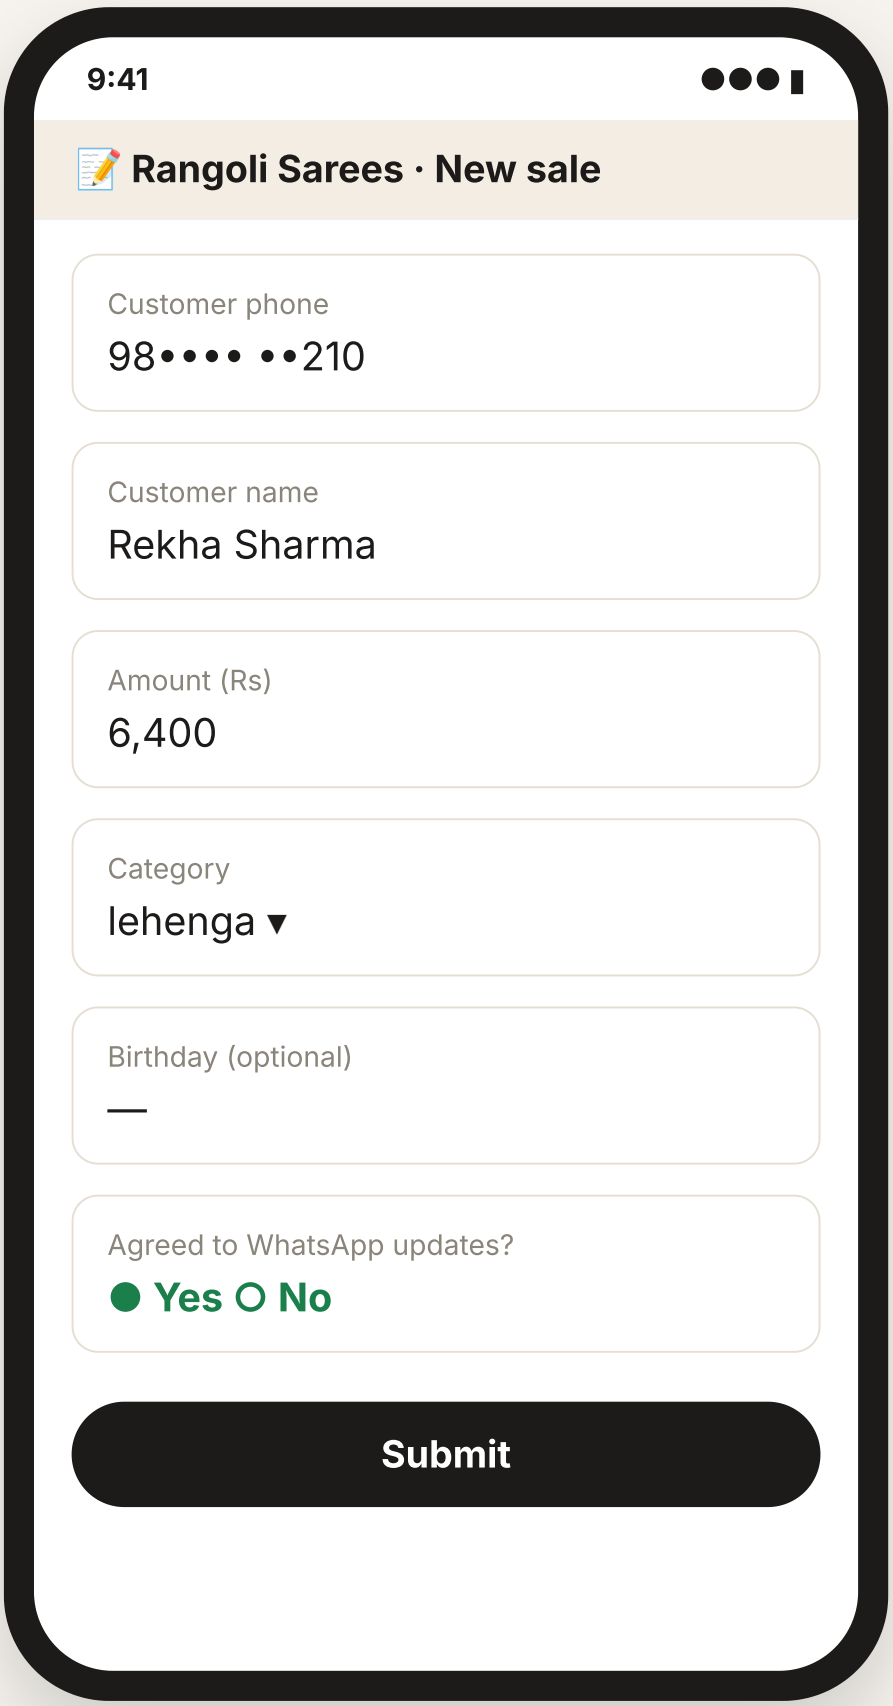

Local shops don't lack customers. They lack memory.
So I built the shop a memory.

STEP 1 · AT THE COUNTER

Every sale: 15 seconds on a Google Form.

WHO

Whoever is at the counter, on the shop phone. The form link is pinned to the home screen.

WHAT

Phone, name, amount, category. Birthday if they share it.

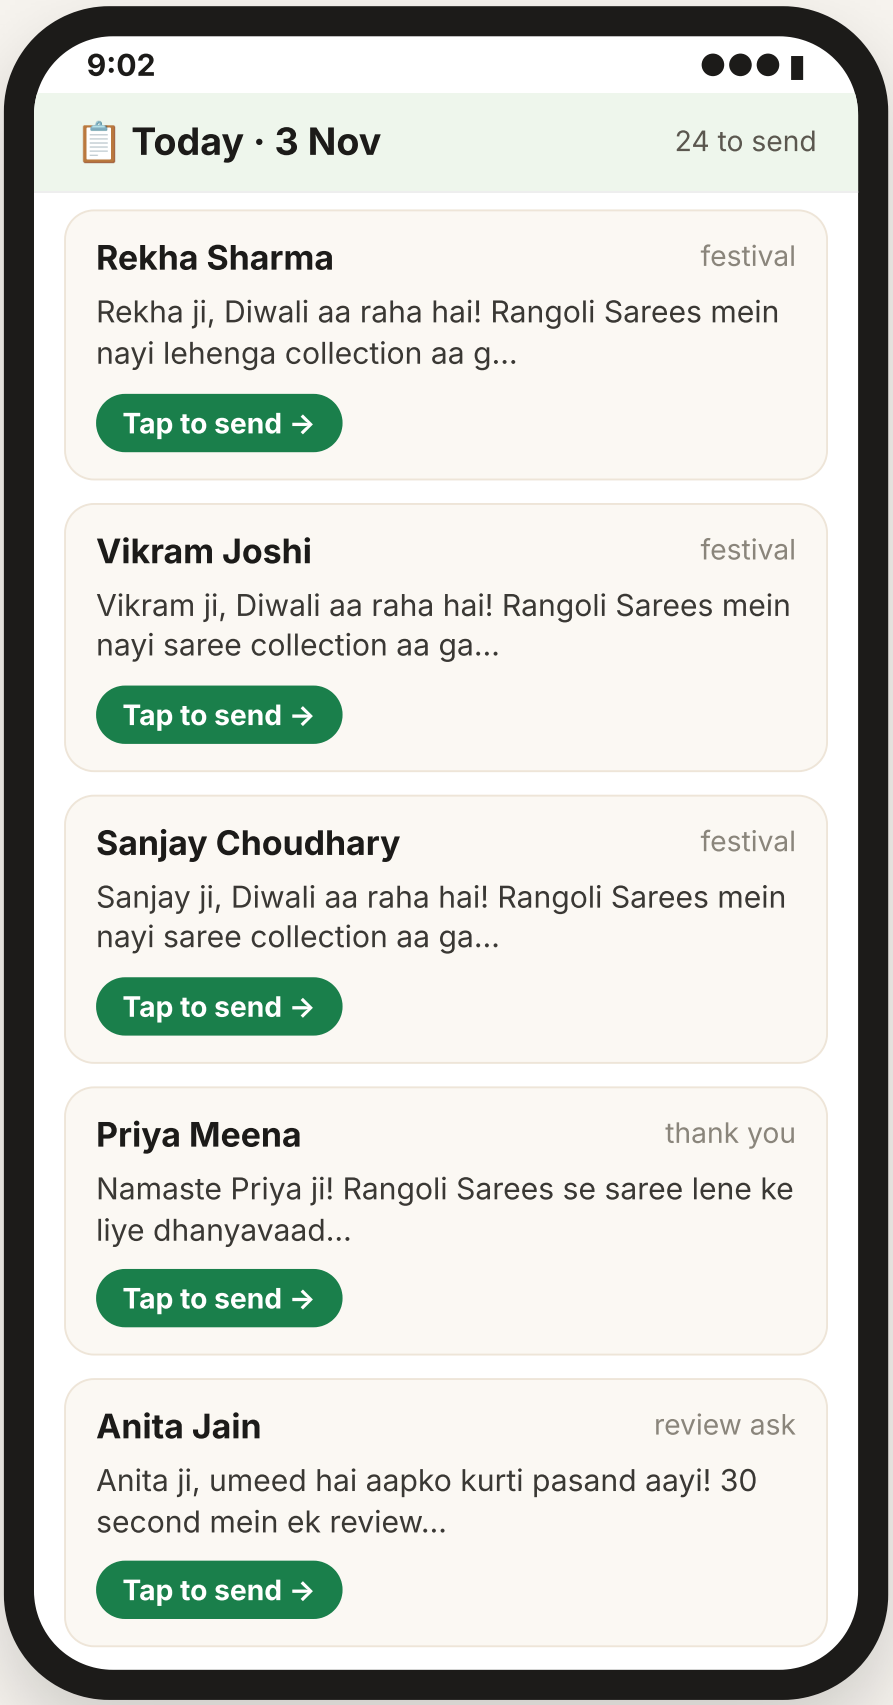

CONSENT

One question: "Can we send you festival and offer updates on WhatsApp?" No means never messaged.

STEP 2 · 9 AM

The agent picks who to message, and writes it.

HOW IT DECIDES

It learns each customer's buying rhythm, then applies the shop's playbook: thank-you, review ask, festival, “due”, “we miss you”.

LIMITS

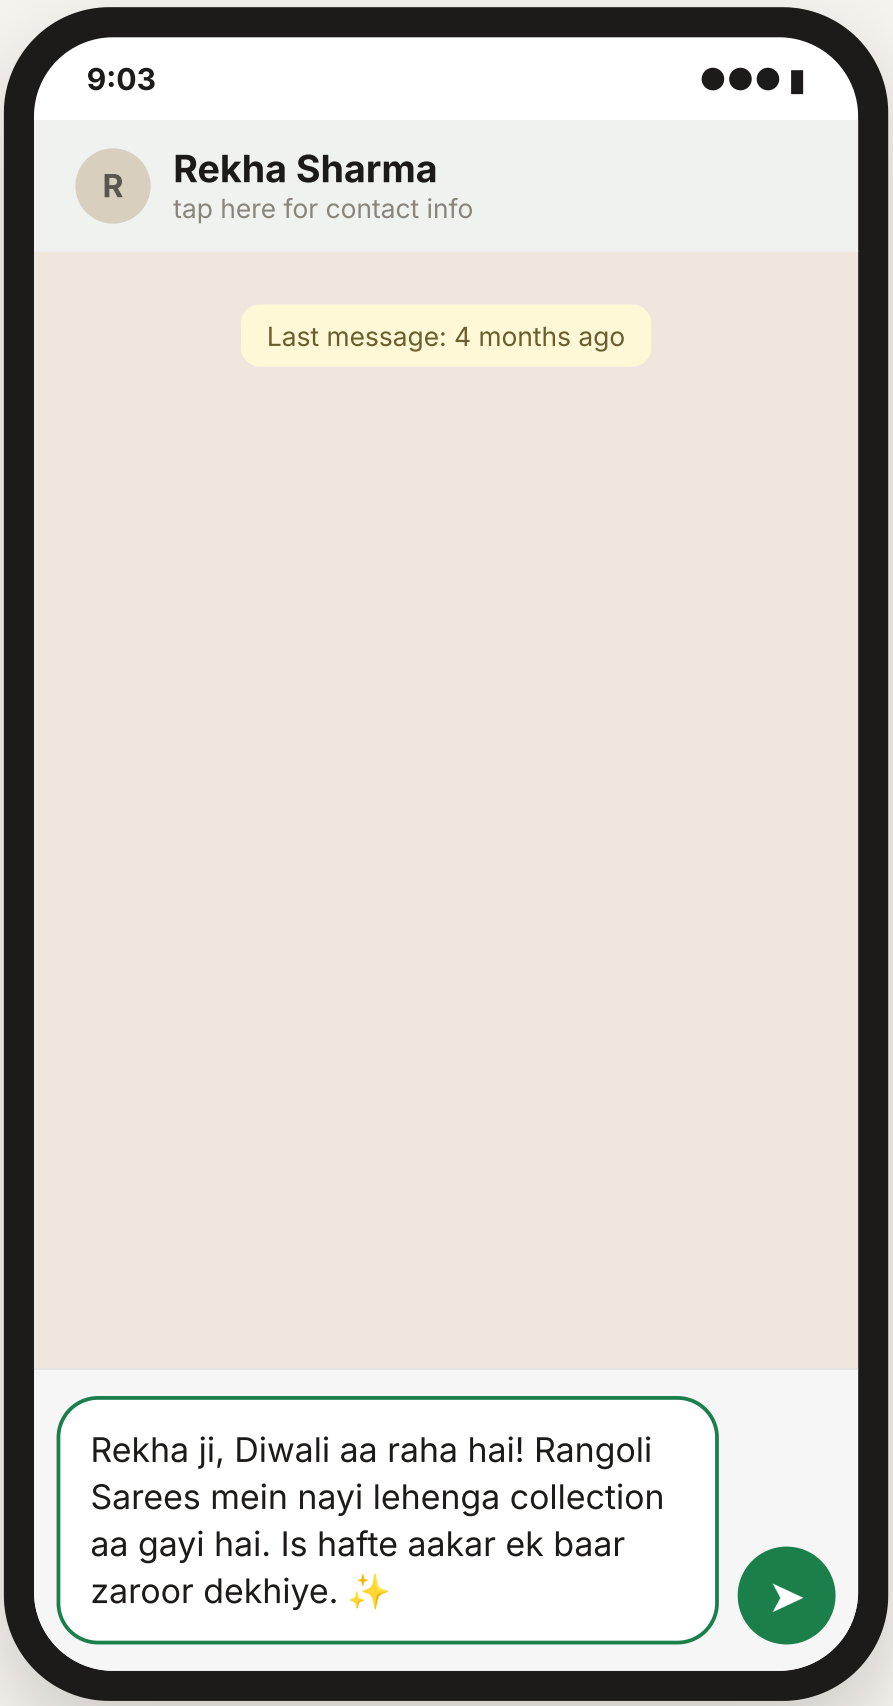

One message a day per person, a gap between messages, a monthly cap. The list stays short enough to tap through.

COST

Runs on n8n with plain code. No AI calls, no API bill.

STEP 3 · TAP

The chat opens with the message already typed.

HUMAN IN THE LOOP

The shopkeeper reads it, edits if they like, and presses send. From their own WhatsApp.

WHY NOT A BOT

Unofficial bots break WhatsApp's rules and numbers get banned. Tap-to-send is free and safe.

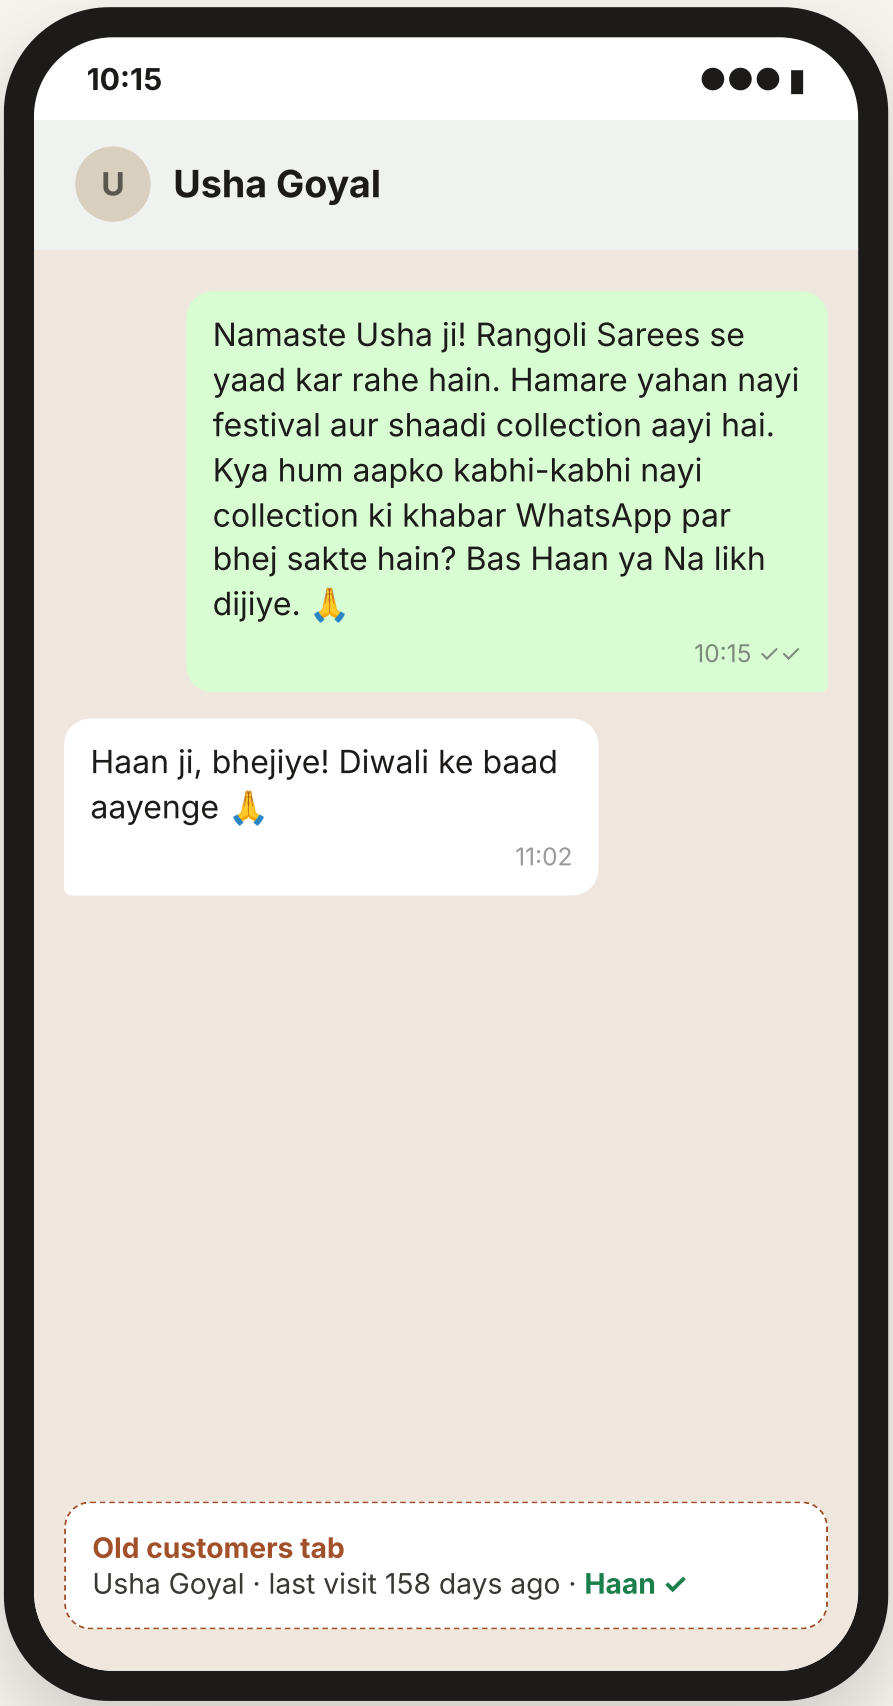

WANT IT AUTOMATIC?

Swap in the official WhatsApp Business API. Meta charges per message.

STEP 4 · OLD CUSTOMERS

Hundreds of old numbers? Import once. Win back slowly.

IMPORT

Paste numbers from the phone or the register into one tab. A phone contacts export works too.

WIN-BACK

About 20 a day, most valuable first. Everyone is messaged once, and the message asks for consent.

HAAN OR NA

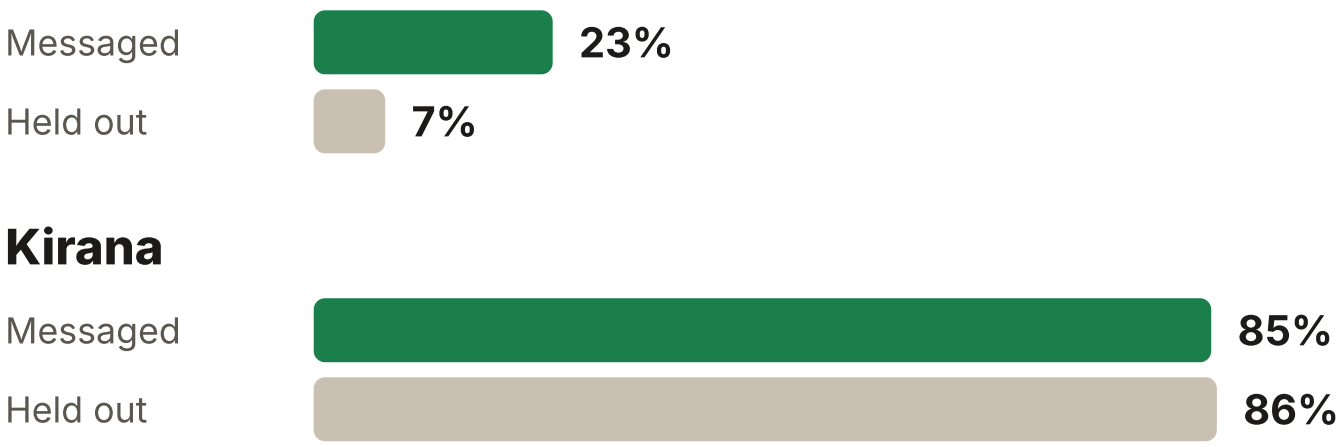

Yes: they join the normal playbook. No: never listed again. Slow pace keeps the number safe from reports.

STEP 5 · PROOF

15% get nothing, on purpose. That's how you know it works.

Came back within 14 days · mock run, planted effect

Saree customers needed the reminder. Kirana regulars were coming anyway.

The real test starts this week.
It's switching on at my family's clothing store in Jaipur. Real numbers in 4 weeks, good or bad.
